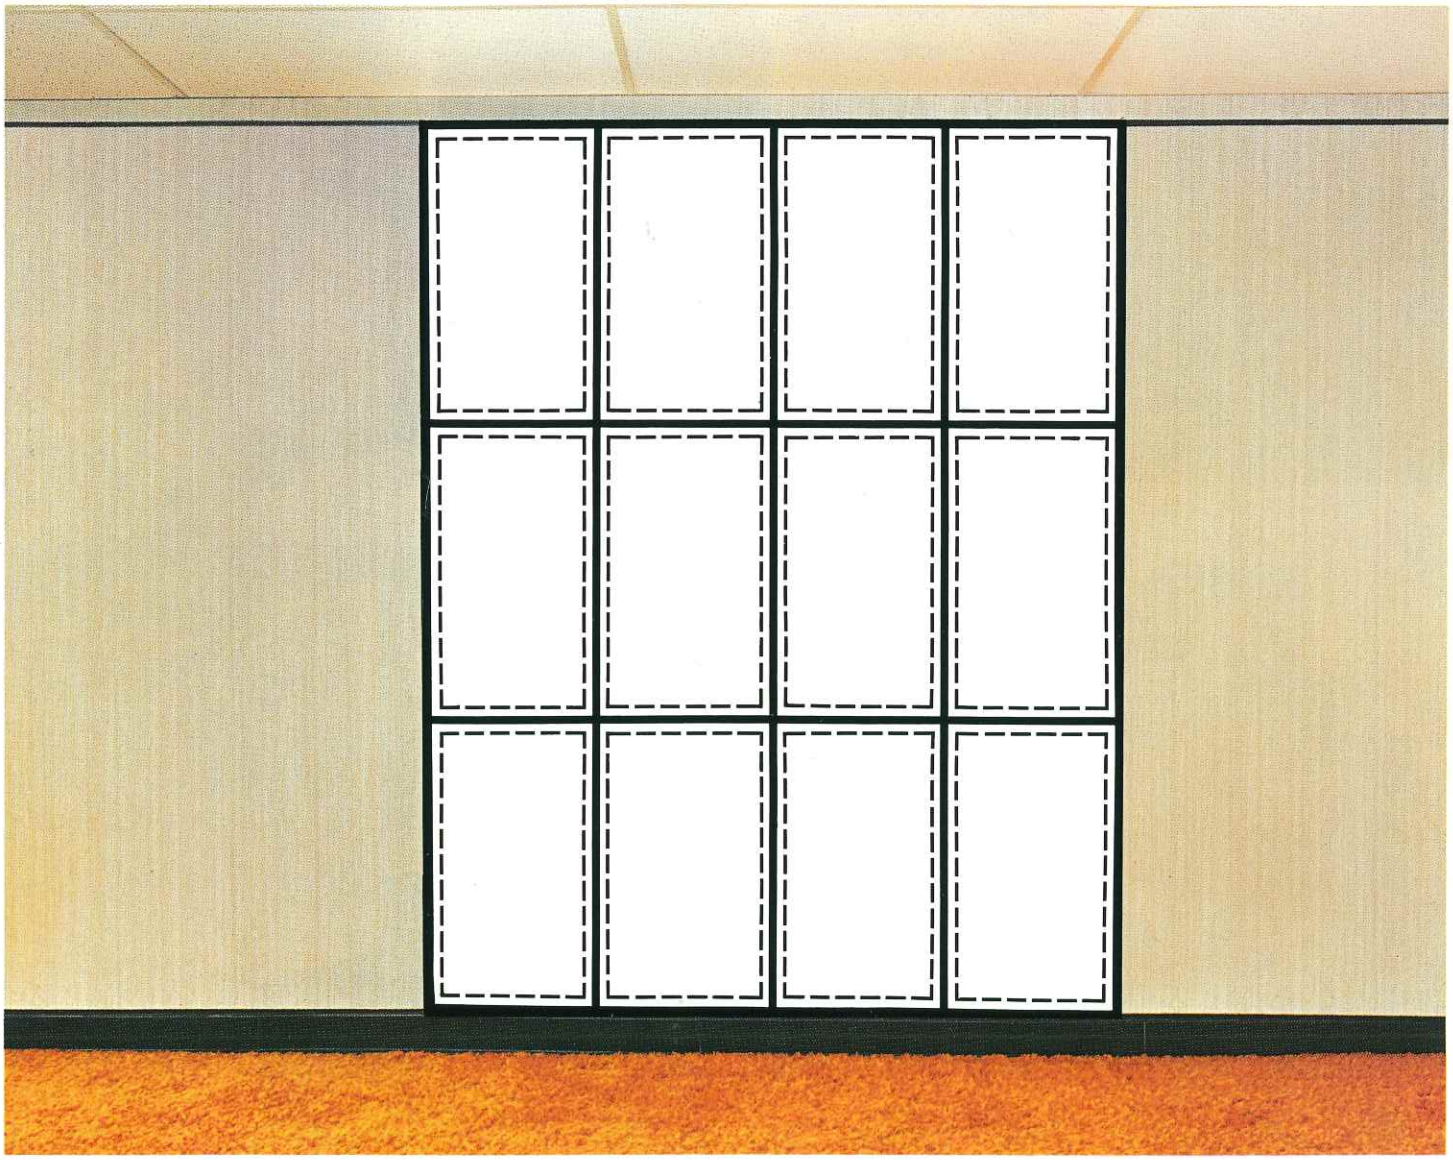
Modular Service Wall System



You design it. We'll build it.

It's the Halsey Taylor Modular Service Wall System. And its wide selection of standardized, functional and decorative panels permits virtually unlimited design freedom. The finished wall centralizes architectural, mechanical and electrical service facilities in symmetrical groupings at any convenient location. It conserves space, reduces the number of isolated wall cutouts normally required and makes the location of critical building facilities—fire equipment, telephones, etc.—easy to remember.

Design latitude

You design your own wall system from an almost infinite variety of functional modules and colors. To start with, you have a choice of eight Polychrome colors, satin finish stainless steel or PATINA bronze tone stainless. Thus, your design latitude encompasses everything from bold, multicolored walls to any of eight solid colored walls. Or a satin finish stainless wall, a PATINA bronze tone wall or either material combined with colors.

Functional services which the wall system incorporates may also be arranged at your discretion: drinking fountains, clocks, directory boards, fire hose and extinguisher cabinets, fire alarm pulls, telephones, ash trays, waste receptacles, loudspeaker grilles and decorative filler panels. All functional components and panels are standardized. Virtually any number of building services may be incorporated in a single station, depending on the amount of wall space you're working with.

Cost

The simplicity of installation and the standardized 18" x 31¼" modules and framing make the cost of the finished wall system no greater than the installed cost of conventional service facilities.
